POLITICAL OUTLOOK

International Center South

America today is living through the most profound demographic change since the turn of the 20th century. The country passed through an historic milestone this year when non-white children, for the first time ever, constituted a majority of the public school students nationwide. By 2018, minority children will represent a majority of all Americans under 18. And through 2030, experts project, minorities will comprise all of the growth in America's workforce.

WELCOME | Stephen Jones, IPAA Vice Chairman; Co-Chair, EnerVest, Ltd.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER | Ron Brownstein, Political Director, Atlantic Media Company; Editorial Director and Columnist, National Journal; Senior Political and Election Analyst for CNN

The Tectonic Plates of American Politics and the Changing Face of America

Ronald Brownstein will explain the underlying forces shaping our current political deadlock; how these forces shape the issue debate in Washington and how they will drive the 2016 election; and what it will take to build consensus that leads us beyond our current partisan impasse.

10:30 am – 11:45 am

BULL OR BEAR MARKET OUTLOOK Hosted by IPAA Supply & Demand Committee

International Center
South

The market continues to be oversupplied but is slowly heading towards rebalancing as North American production begins to decline more quickly and demand continues to grow. However, considerable risk remains in forecasting the timing of the rebalancing. Companies have been enduring a period of low prices and volatility which has resulted in unprecedented investment reductions as seen in cap-ex and activity indicators. There is little doubt that the North American oil and natural gas industry will emerge with a different look than what existed before the downturn. This panel of experts will look at some of the key drivers and strategies companies are following to prepare for the road ahead.
